About this guide

In this document you will find information regarding the following Courses of first cycle and full cycle degrees for the 2012/2013 Academic Year.

New Departmental organization and Siena University

Instead of the current 9 Faculties, University of Siena will be constituted of 15 new organizational units: the Departments. Degree Courses will only be marginally affected, in that they will administratively belong to one of the new Departments, as opposed to a Faculty: from the student's point of view, only the Course administrative "container" will change.

The new Departments will be: Information Engineering and Mathematical sciences; Environment, Earth and Physical sciences; Life sciences; Biotechnology, Chemistry and Pharmaceutical sciences; Medical Biotechnologies; Molecular & Developmental medicine; Medical-Surgical sciences & Neurosciences; Education, Human sciences and Inter-cultural communication; Philological, Classical and Modern literature Critical studies; History and Cultural heritage; Social, political and cognitive Sciences; Political and international sciences; Economics and Statistics, Business and Law studies; Law.

Contents

For each degree we indicate:

- the degree's Denomination, which also indicates its duration: 1st level degrees span 3 years (at the end of which a student can proceed to a 2 year II cycle degrees, and to a 1st level master); full cycle or EU-regulation degree courses span 5 or 6 years (followed optionally by a "third cycle" course: 1st and 2nd level masters, Research Doctorates, Postgraduate Schools)
- The degree's Class: 1st and 2nd level degrees are grouped in Classes, stating the academic aims and their corresponding educational activities. Degree belonging to the same Class, therefore, share common educational aims
- the degree's total number of Credits, and each course's (or group of Courses, where multiple choices are available) Credits
- the admission/Numerus Clausus requirements, if present: some degrees have conditional access. Each year a Nationally-set number of students is allowed to enrol to such courses. Selection is done via nation-wide compulsory admission exam, simultaneous held in all Italian public Universities, which result in the publication of a ranking list containing the names of the students who can enrol and attend lessons.

For each conditional access course, the maximum number of allowed students is stated here, as well as in the public examination announcement, which usually also contains the numbers of seats reserved for students belonging to special categories.

All other degrees, instead, require a simple assessment test, which is compulsory, but neither selective nor binding against enrolment. It is very important for a student to clearly distinguish between the two types of exams, the former granting access to a "Numerus Clausus" degree, while the latter's only purpose is to evaluate a student's level of preparation in a certain set of subjects, which are deemed to be of particular importance to successfully complete the chosen academic career.

- Career prospects: for each degree, we indicate a list of the employment opportunities available after obtaining the degree. The list comprises only the professional careers stated in the official degree syllabi, and recognized by the National Statistics Office; this is, however, only a subset of all the available opportunities. Some areas of employment (engineering, law or medical studies). In some cases (eg. Health care Sciences) a degree is recognized as Direct Qualification, and is indicated as "professional qualification for...".

- National Qualification Exams: after having obtained a degree, in some case a National Qualification Exam has to be taken, to obtain a professional Qualification
- Referring Professors: the members of the Teaching Committee, who can be contacted to receive further information, or orientation guidance
- Available Second Cycle Courses: at the end of each section, a separate box contains the II cycle degrees available after the chosen 1st level degree.
